Kingeroo

Kingeroo got up in the morning,

put on his crown,

put on his glasses,

and walked to the bathroom.

He turned the faucet on and looked in the mirror:

A big black stain hid his face.

Kingeroo was mad, he called to the maid and yelled:

"You're not doing your job! You're lazy!

Go quickly and clean the mirror!"

Then he went to the kitchen to eat breakfast.

On the table, on a silver platter, was a sunny-side up egg.

Kingeroo looked at the platter,

A sunny-side up egg with a big black stain stared back at him.

Kingeroo raged.

He called to the cook and yelled:

"Fry me a new egg immediately!"

Then he went to his room to look at a picture book and play with his toys.

But the pictures were all covered in black stains.

Even the toys looked dirty.

Kingeroo didn't know what to do.

Angry and sad, he went out to the garden to smell the flowers.

But when he bent down he saw that they were covered in ugly black stains!

Kingeroo screamed:

Lazy gardeners, come immediately and clean the flowers!"

He ranted and raged, kicked a rock and hurt his foot.

His foot hurt,

really hurt!

Kingeroo cried out loud.

Kingeroo's nanny
heard his cries,
and quickly ran to him:

"What are you doing outside, unwashed, uncombed, in your pajamas?"

"I'm mad at the maid
I'm mad at the cook,
I'm mad at the gardeners!
I'm mad at everybody
because they didn't clean the world!"

His nanny hugged him tightly,

took off his glasses,
wiped the lenses

and put them back on his nose.

Kingeroo looked at the flowers.
They no longer had black stains on them,
their colors were bright and fresh!

Kangeroo kissed his nanny

and ran to the kitchen to eat breakfast.
